Accessibility Statement

Website and public activities

Last updated: 30 August 2026

Our commitment

Novar Network CIC is committed to making our website, communications and public activities as accessible and inclusive as reasonably possible. We want people from different backgrounds, abilities and circumstances to be able to learn about Novar and take part in our work.

Our approach

- We aim to use clear, straightforward language across our website and public communications.
- We aim to provide readable digital content and clear headings and links.
- We aim to make our online information usable across common devices and browsers.
- For Novar events and gatherings, we aim to consider accessibility needs when planning venues, formats, communications and participation.
- Where an activity has specific accessibility arrangements or limitations, we will provide relevant information to participants in advance where possible.

If you experience a barrier

If you have difficulty accessing any part of the Novar website or one of our activities, please let us know. We welcome suggestions about how we can improve accessibility and will consider reasonable ways to address the issue.

Ongoing improvement

Accessibility is an ongoing commitment. As Novar develops, we will review our website, digital content and activities and look for practical ways to improve accessibility.
